The Lexington Gas Company still keep up their war prices for the stuff they call gas. The only completion of the St. Sterling coal road will do away with the excuse that coal is high-priced in Lexington. LUDLOW, KY.—Council met in regular session last night, President Savage in the Chair and a quorum present. As usual the same old story is to be told. The call of Standing Committees produces no business, although it is a well known fact that plenty of it lies dormant in the pockets and pigeon-holes of the over-taxed Council.

The introduction of any measure of importance just now might, perhaps, "worry a fellow's chance of re-election." And that, you know, is a paramount aim that can not be lost out of sight just now. Our glorious, backsliding Temperance Council undertook to eat a little more "crow" last night. But what John Grace's last addition to the honorable body not being up to "tricks" that are vain," just left the thing where they wanted it," by voting No. On J. H. Birkenkamp's petition for coffee-house license, Messrs. Jas. Nixon, Robert Wiley, A. Hunt and J. Grace, who voted in the affirmative, looked bewildered at the time affairs and taken in consequence of the gallant Nelson vote; but there was the document. As Clerk Barr read its mournful tale, slaughtered most fully in the house of its friends, as "Bob and Me" looked on in mute astonishment, and drawing a long and solemn breath, a tear of regret could be seen dangling on the ends of their noses, as they viewed the deadly petition in the last stage of dissolution. And there sat the cause of all the woe, surrounded by the friends of the deceased petition, urging him to change his vote, yet knowing such to be impossible, Grace going so far as to appeal to the President for a suspension of the rules—a silly request that received little result, and a motion for adjournment. Pending a motion to adjourn, strange as it may appear, the Sergeant-at-Arms was dispatched post haste for the absentees, but all to no purpose. The whole thing was "set up," and as we have before stated in the Star there are no more licenses to be granted until after election, a matter which all the citizens should make themselves perfectly acquainted with, and important time, and give those gentlemen who are so expert on carrying water on both shoulders for the sake of re-election a "waterloo defeat" at the coming elections.

Ellis, the present Deputy County Clerk, is certainly an excellent man for the office; W. E. McLaughlin and Rick Battle are also candidates. For County Jailor, Berry Conley, the present host of the Hotel De County, is a candidate. Barney Wellenbrink is also aspiring to the office. For Street Commissioner, B. Kehr, and the deplorable old nuisance Dick Hackett. For City Collector, Theodore Welling, J. M. Ransom, J. J. McLean and John Felthaus. Among the above candidates the contest lies between Felthaus and Ransom, both good men. Whatmaster, J. J. Galvin, no opposition. Markmaster, Dick Lambert. City Attorney, J. P. Harrison. Rubs McDonald is a candidate for re-election to Council. Second, S. Scott, L. L. Blackley and A. P. Rose are working and wittingly in the Third ward. Dick Edwards and Wm. Hall in the Sixth.

FROM DAYTON.

Correspondence of the Star.

DAYTON, O., Nov. 19th.

Dr. Lord's lectures are drawing large audiences, his subjects chosen being those interesting to others besides the lecture-goers. His "Raphael" (pronounced by the Doctor Rafale) was listened to with delight. "Gallies" was also found to be a subject admitting many well-turned flashes of eloquence and anecdotal wit. He promises to review "Queen Elizabeth" on Monday evening next, and the auditorium will, no doubt, be filled to overflowing with the many admirers of the Doctor.

Last (Thursday) evening materialized spirits held away and walked the boards at Music Hall. Whether they were spirits of earth or "goblins damned" was a conundrum that five or six hundred persons were unable to guess. At any rate a police officer hand-cuffed the medium in true professional fashion and the coast upon the medium's back came off by aid of some unseen agency in spite of the lecturer.

Wise men, shook gray heads, foolish youth uttered little screams of mingled horror and wonder and incredulity as half a dozen arms and even a faintly shadowed face appeared in the atmospheric space above and around the footlights. The lights were allowed to glare in undisturbed lustre throughout the house as well as upon the stage, and no horoscope of mysterious darkness was resorted to. The audience was made up of believers, unbelievers in a state of calm indifference, unbelievers in a state of scoffing vehemence, of folks curious and folks terrified—in fact the usual audience one finds at such entertainments.

When an addition of the well-known faces of long-standing Dayton families, of Knickerbockerish respectability, who, being interspersed here and there, gave more tone to the gathering than is usually the case.

The Camilla Urso concert troupe are to be here to-night, and great things are promised. Dayton can stand one Camilla or so, but if the tickets call for so many greenbacks one will suffice. For future entertainment behold Theodore Tilton down on the cards for the 7th of December; subject, "The Problem of Life."

"Tramp, tramp, tramp, the boys are marching, but the news that the old stone jail down on Main and Sixth streets is to be turned into a work-house with all possible haste, is compelling them to only give a passing glance at this picturesque city of ours and meander toward the black roots and high protecting hills of our Queen mother-in-law."

Hard work and plain fare are promised in abundance to the houseless wanderers, and, although your correspondent fears, still he serves as a faithful scarecrow, still he hopes a few of the moneyless pilgrims will find shelter and a lesson beneath its towers.

A new goose ordinance is taking effect here, and all geese will be prohibited from promiscuously roaming the sacred precincts of the Dayton avenues. A neighborly warning was mailed to the geese, and a notice of the ordinance was placed in the future. Hence of the city, to which we answer feelingly that the ordinance will at least prevent boredom at the hands of those unlucky villagers. It is a strange sight to live in large places to roam about the wide sunny streets, whose gutterways, grown over with soil green moss, seem alive with domestic animals. Geese graze about the curbstone that runs along directly in front of some grand houses; pigs sun themselves in luxurious shade on the square-corner of a magnificent hotel, while geese waddle slowly and majestically, in neat Indian file, along the crowded thoroughfare. It makes the uncommercial traveler forget that there really is a public library right over the market-house and a landscape hotel and thereabout the town. He only wonders if the present decade hasn't gone back on him.

It seems that no one week can go by without some terrible tragedy startling those near the scene of misadventure. This week the suicide is that of a boy, by name Edward Landis, aged fourteen years. The facts of the case are related as follows: On Sunday morning last, the parents of Landis left the house to go to church, leaving Edward to take care of his two younger sisters. To obey his parents, he stayed at home, though most unwillingly, and remained moody and sullen all day. In the evening he begged his sisters to accompany him to church. This they were disinclined to do, telling him he should go on without them; but he refused to do so and threatened to kill himself if they refused him their company.

One of the sisters thought to stay his rashness by telling him that she would accompany him, and she went with him. Edward's zed a board and threatened to kill her if she persisted in so doing. At this juncture both the sisters ran away from the house and out into the yard. Edward quietly took down a loaded gun from its place and going out in full view of his sisters aimed it at his forehead and pulled the trigger; but the clip did not explode and this young madman coolly fitted a fresh one in its place. Calling to his sisters to take their last look at him, he pulled the trigger. Both sisters ran away from him almost beside themselves with agonized terror; but hearing the report of the gun they turned about to find their brother lying dead upon the ground. The contents of the gun had entered his forehead, blowing off the entire top of his head and scattering the brains upon the ground about him.

Mortuary Record: William D. Moore, aged 33 years, late of Company I, Sixty-sixth Reg., Ill.; Clara Anna Ferguson, 4 years; Eliza Mittenburger, aged 61 years; Catherine Frug, aged 30 years.

Another ordinance besides that of the unucky geese is to be, or has been, passed. It is simply concerning awnings. No awnings are to be allowed before stores or on public squares, as they disfigure the sidewalks and are dangerous in regard to fire.

Soldiers' Home cigars have been shipped to St. Louis in the sum of some $8,000, taxes on them amounting to over $500.

Dayton persistently refuses to furnish more items. SATURN.

"The Rectory of Mr. May" was the subject of Mr. M. D. Conway's lecture last evening at College Hall. It was treated of in a most interesting and learned manner, such as only Mr. Conway is master of. The lecture closes Mr. Conway's series in this city, but we hope that at no distant day arrangements will be made for another series.

Amusements.

THE GRAND OPERA-HOUSE—"Hamlet," with Mr. Sullivan as the Melancholy Dane, was the attraction last evening, when even a larger audience was assembled than upon its first representation.

The character of the audience, and the time and honest outbursts of applause was as high and sincere a compliment as could well be paid an actor. Mr. Sullivan was well supported, hardly a single flaw being perceptible in the acting of any one, while many were worthy of a detailed notice if space would permit it. Mr. Sullivan appears as "Stranger," at the matinee this afternoon.

WOOD'S THEATRE—"Zip," "Philosophy Jack" and "Amanda Lovelace" entertained a large audience again last evening at Mr. Macaulay's Theatre. The former especially was immense, as Lotta always is in anything she does, while Locke and Miss Mayer, in the "fainting" scene, were voted by the audience a decided success. Mr. Barton's "Italian" has improved with the use of his representation, and last night was a bit of acting as we have seen for some time. Lotta remains at this house during next week, appearing in her new play by Marsden entitled "Musette." "Zip" will be given at the matinee this afternoon.

ROBINSON'S OPERA-HOUSE—McKee Rankin's excellent combination appeared to a good house last evening in the "Two Girls" and were well received, as they deserved. This company is one of the very best that has ever visited our city, not excepting the renowned Fifth Avenue Troupe, and their rendition of this beautiful play last night was excellent. Matinee to-day at 2 o'clock.

THE NATIONAL—Quite a large audience assembled at this popular place of amusement last night and were highly entertained, at an extensive and interesting bill being offered them. Matinee to-day at two o'clock.
